Ann Loader my 4th great-grandma she was born in Ashton-Rowant in England April 19, 1825. Her dad's name was James Loader and her mom's name was Amy Britnell. She had 4 brothers and 8 sisters and all together including her makes 13 children.

Ann's dad gardened the Lord's (Sir Henry Lambert) garden because he was really good at gardening. Because her dad worked for the Lord, they were rich. Ann got to go to school with her siblings and the Lord's children. Ann was a really good seamstress, so she sewed for the Lord's family. Later, when she got older, she sewed for Queen Victoria. Because she sewed for Queen Victoria, she got to be in her coronation parade.

Ann joined The Church of Jesus of Latter-Day Saints on November 4th 1850 and she was the first person in her family to do it. After that her mom and dad joined the church the Lord did not like that Ann's dad had joined the church and he told him he only had 2 months to make up his mind or else the Lord would fire him. 2 months had passed, and he did not leave the church and so he fired him. They had to lose their house because the Lord gave it to him. Because of that they had to move to Liver Pool. They were saving up money to move to America.

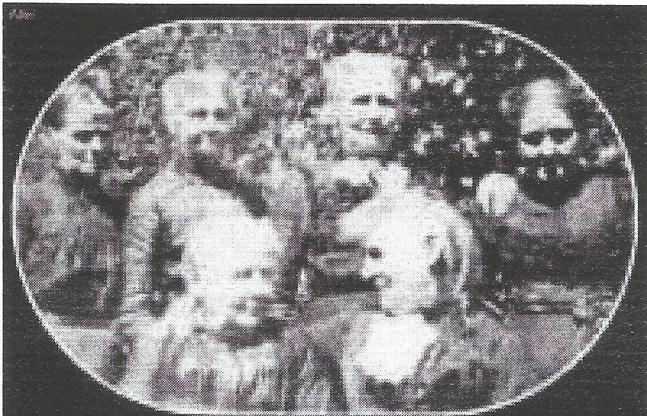

Ann got married to James Coleman November 19, 1846. James Colman died or left Ann but nobody knows what happened to him. She had one son named William Coleman. Before she left for America she fell in love with Jon Dalling, a missionary for the church. They had planned to meet in Utah after his mission and get married. Ann Loader sailed to America on a ship called the Jueenta with her 5-year-old son.

Ann traveled across the plains with the Martin Handcart company. Ann and her son were traveling alone which the wagon master did not like, so he was quite mean to them. While traveling Ann burnt her foot so bad that she did not wear shoes or socks so she was bare foot. She asked the wagon master if she could ride in the wagon and he said no. They got to the Platte river and the Platte river is muddy and cold so Ann and her son could not walk through the river because of her foot and they were left behind. Then Ann prayed for help to get across the river. After she prayed some men came with donkeys let them on a donkey and they made it across the river. After some traveling they made it and Ann married John in Salt Lake City, Utah on November 11 1855. Their home was in Pleasant Grove Utah. John was a shoe maker. A year after they were married the rest of Ann's family came to Utah. John and Ann had one son John Loader Dalling (my 3rd great grandpa). A few years later John had an accident and was stabbed in the thigh with an awl and died in March 1858. In July she had her 2nd son Marshall Loader Dalling.

After John died she married William Paul, he already had 9 children. With William Paul she had two more boys and adopted a girl. All together they had 14 children! After William Paul died, Ann moved to Sugar City, Idaho. Ann would travel back and forth from Idaho to Utah visiting all of her children. She was a widow for 40 years and lived to be 100 years old. Ann died on August 24th, 1925.
