Dennis Mark Gray

Dennis Mark Gray is my grandpa. He was born in the summer of 1964 on August third. He is still living today.

Dennis was born in Juneau, Alaska, the fiftieth state. He is the 6th child out of 7 with 3 brothers and 3 sisters. His nickname was Den and he got it from his dad. When he was 8 years old he got baptized in the Bering Sea near the ocean. After that he moved to Idaho Falls and now he lives in Cedar City, Utah.

Dennis likes to go fishing and play sports, especially baseball. In baseball he was the pitcher in college for Dixie College and also played at Ricks College. When he was living in Idaho Falls he caught a very big fish that was heavy for him and almost fell down on his bike. He still loves to go fishing today.

Dennis' biggest challenge was when his son Erik died. Erik died of cancer and had been fighting it for 7 years. Dennis overcomes this challenge by spending time with the family.

Dennis has been in Cedar City for 27 years. He owns a company that builds buildings and houses. One of my favorite buildings he built is the Culver's restaurant in Cedar City, Utah. I like to go and see his job sites wherever they are. Since he lives in Cedar City, I get to see him a lot.

Dennis and I have a few things in common. One thing we have in common is that we both like baseball and we both pitched before in a game. Another thing we have in common is we are both hard workers. We both work hard until it is done.

My Grandpa is a cool person. He did some really cool things in his life. I am glad he is my Grandpa.
