The ancestor that I chose to talk about is my grandma Patricia Ruth Cassidy. She is my dad's mother. She was born January 21st 1951, in Santa Monica California. A fun fact is that my mother's dad was also born there too. She passed away on June 11th 2005 from cancer.

She was born in Santa Monica California. She later moved to Alaska. She spent some time in Germany with her mom. She moved to Colorado and loved it so much that she moved back there when she was married. Her mom was from Ireland and her dad was born in Missouri. Her father John was in the Army as a paratrooper. Her mom ran an antique store. Patricia learned how to run a business which was an antique store. She taught my dad and his siblings how to start their own businesses too.

Patricia got married twice and had three sons and one daughter and the youngest kid was my dad.

She was a ballet dancer. I like to dance too. Like me, she likes art and music. She also plays the guitar, and I play the piano. She loved hiking, painting and she made Indian jewelry. She started to make a quilt for her future grandchildren, but passed away before she had any grandchildren. My mom's mother finished the quilt after we were born. Now we have a quilt made from both grandmas. We have a lot in common, and I hope to be like her someday. I never met her but doing this report made me know a lot about her. Still have her picture on our wall.

This is Grandma Patricia.

This is the quilt that both grandmas made for me. Patricia started it. My other grandma finished it after she died.
