On Thursday afternoon the party of trail blazers of the Arrowhead Association who are en route from Redlands, California, to Salt Lake City, via the all-the-year route, arrived in Cedar City, being met about Hamilton's Fort by half a dozen or more car loads of people from this place.

The party at this time consists of the following: Mr. Douglas White, general industrial agent of the Salt Lake Route; Mont Chubb, president of the Arrowhead Trails Association; Dr. W. R. Burke and wife, a booster for the route; J. H. Fisher, president of the Redlands Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by his wife; C. H. Biglow and F. U. Owen, of Los Angeles; H. H. Ford, president Redlands National Bank; A. Seipsic, dry goods merchant, Redlands; Franklin Bell, orange grower, Redlands; Miss Pyle, of Pasadena.

A meeting was arranged for the visitors in the evening, and was addressed by some of the prominent visitors, who explained the objects of the Arrowhead Trails Association and the benefit the highway would be to this section of the country.

At the close of the meeting steps were taken for the organization of a local chapter of the association at this place.

The party left Cedar City north-bound this morning, their next stop to be Parowan, where another chapter of the association would be formed. It was expected that the expedition would reach Salt Lake Sunday.

Owing to a lack of time, the proposed trip into Cedar canyon had to be abandoned.
