

Mexican Laborers Brought To County

On Monday afternoon, April 23, twenty Mexican Nationals were delivered to Cedar City by the War Food Administration, through the Extension Service, to work as farm laborers in Iron County. These men are from the rural areas of Old Mexico and range in age from 20 to 35 years. Most of them are married men who have left their families at home for the season while they've come, by the request of the United States Government, to assist with the production of farm crops in this country. None of them know the English language, but their employers will try to teach them the language and farming methods of this area during their stay here.

Farmers and livestock men who will employ these Mexican Nationals are as follows: Weyl Zuckerman and Company, Kimball Jensen, Joel C. Barlow, N. J. Barlow and Jay Halterman.
